

BALLOON GAMES!

Almost everybody has balloons left over from a party . Well they are great to play with and won't break things and they do keep kids busy. It's just keeping the balloon off the ground . See how long the kids can keep it up. Make it a game between you and the kids. If you want to come up with a scoring plan or some type of motivation that's up to you. Want to make it more challenging, make sure they only do it with one hand or have them bat it into a room with a time limit and see if they can beat their best time.

Also you can make it a game of volleyball. A friendly game. Some one on each side of the dining room table. You can have points and out of bounds. My brother and the kids had a great time with it Saturday. Or just a simple game of keep away with teams mom and one child on one team dad and the other child on the other team. The object of the game though is to keep the balloon in the air. It's great for coordination and for tiring the kids out so you can have some down time. Hope this gives you some ideas. Good luck.

Take care and stay safe

Linda
McCurdy